

Happily Ever After

Volume 1, Fall 2026

Welcome to BooksbyHaven's newsletter! Read on to get the tea!

New Book Alert

My fourth novel, Cordelia, is now with beta readers!

With a little luck, it should be published by late fall. I always feel a little sad when I wrap up work on a book, because I love the characters so much.

Cordelia is a woman with baggage. When she finally decides to do something to help herself, she ends up on a quest. But for what? Self-knowledge, power, liberty, love? All of these things and more.

Fun Fact- There are magical and fantastical elements in this book, and, because it's me, there's always a happy ending.

Thank you to the beta readers for Cordelia

THANK YOU TO THE BETA READERS FOR CORUENNA-

Behind the Scenes- Marketing The Rowhouses

If you don't follow @booksbyhaven on Instagram or Facebook or TikTok or X or Goodreads.....you should!

It's entertaining to watch me struggle to produce entertaining content. I'm building a community over here so like, follow, and let me know your thoughts!

Seriously though, as an indie author, marketing through social media is a vital part of getting the word out about the books I've written. It's a no-cost way to reach many people, at least in theory. I can't lie, it's surprised me just how much this marketing work takes.

In the Kitchen with Haven

Writing on hot afternoons can make me sleepy. To combat ANS (Afternoon Nap Syndrome), I mix up a batch of mint green tea. Soooo refreshing!

What you'll need:

- 1 bag or scoop of loose green tea in a tea ball
- 1 bag or scoop of loose peppermint tea in a tea ball
- A mug
- Hot water
- A large metal tumbler filled with ice

What to do:

- Place both tea bags or tea balls in the mug
- Fill with hot water
- Brew for 1-2 minutes
- Remove tea
- Pour hot tea over the tumbler of ice (Be very careful!)

ENJOY!

What I'm Reading

Alexander at the End of the World by Rachel Kousser

This is a non-fiction review of the later part of Alexander the Great's life. The truth is usually more interesting and inspiring than anything I could write.

The Knight and the Moth by Rachel Gillig

Oh the slow burn, enemies to lovers in this one!! And the scene stealing gargoyle will melt your heart

Yesteryear by Caro Claire Burke

A gripping story with a truly modern situation. You may recognize the main character! Emotional content high on this one!

Fav Reads

I read a lot of books! It's research, right? This summer's five star reads:

The Briar Club by Kate Quinn

At the Water's Edge by Sara Gruen

Any of the Rivers of London series!! By Ben Aaronovitch

The White Octopus Hotel by Alexandra Bell

Brimstone by Callie Hart
